REPORT: ASMCF ANNUAL CONFERENCE 2010 REPORT

ASMCF CONFERENCE 2010 REPORT
NOTTINGHAM TRENT UNIVERSITY 9-11 SEPTEMBER 2010
LA FRANCE ET LA CRISE: BILANS, RUPTURES ET ANTÉCÉDENTS

The Association wishes to thank the co-organisers, Professor Martin O'Shaughnessy and Dr Chris Reynolds, together with all the team of behind the scenes helpers for underpinning an excellent, topical and thought-provoking conference.

The theme drew contributions from a wide range of disciplines spanning history, economics, politics, film studies and industrial relations in addition to philosophy, gender and cultural studies and post-colonialism. The three keynote speakers reflected this breadth, a fundamental characteristic of ASMCF: the opening plenary of Frédéric Lordon, Trancher. Le nœud gordien des contradictions du capitalisme néolibéral, gave an intensive yet comprehensive analysis of France's position in relation to the global economy; the closing plenary, Isabelle Sommier's Le renouveau de la critique sociale depuis des années 1990, presented an overview of socio-political action and discourse in France over the last two decades; referring us to antécédents, the Peter Morris Lecture delivered by Professor Brian Jenkins midway through the conference, highlighted and recontextualised debates around the crises of 1934 and 1968.

The conference was well-attended, with some 72 delegates, many of whom were non-UK based, coming from France, Belgium, USA and Australia. It is most gratifying that the conference and the Association maintain such a wide appeal. Moreover there was a strong postgraduate attendance, reflecting increased PG membership and the success of postgraduate study days. The postgraduate poster session was also a success.

The AGM on Friday 10 September was well attended, electing two members to the committee, Dr Helena Chadderton and Professor Jan Windebank.

The venue, the Conference Centre in the centrally situated and recently redeveloped Newton Building, provided a most congenial cadre for the event: the welcome was excellent, as were arrangements for refreshments and meals. Thank you to those ensuring this infrastructure, as well as to the representatives of Taylor and Francis and Peter Lang who were present with journal and book displays respectively.

A final heartfelt thank you to all paper-givers, session chairs, the two co-organisers and the many colleagues at NTU who collaborated to make this a memorable conference.
